Quest Forward Learning

Opportunity Education is proud to help teachers and student support staff adopt a student-centered, project-based, and skills-forward approach to teaching and learning: Quest Forward Learning.

Midland University is providing a one graduate credit for the Quest Forward Learning Institute that is held over a four day period.

EDU 590 | Quest Forward Learning | 1 Credit

Genuine engagement from students is a complicated problem facing education today and often a barrier for students in achieving academic and long-term success.

Quest Forward Learning is an evidence-based pedagogical approach to teaching and learning consisting of active learning, a skills forward approach, and feedback. Improved student agency, relevant learning, and more formative feedback can lead to a more systematic solution leading to more engaged students and teachers.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course participants will be able to:

- Discover key terminology and practices related to the Quest Forward Learning method.
- Practice strategies to investigate the curriculum and LMS, compose plans, and integrate the Learning and Work Skills and feedback model. Learn from colleagues and experts on a variety of topics.
- Engage in a flexibly-paced approach to professional learning.
- Identify ways teachers use Quest Forward Learning to engage students.

August 2 - August 5, 2022

The total cost for the Quest Forward Learning graduate credit is $100.
